In 2014, Spicer traveled to Kolkata India to reconnect with his heritage and culture. During his time there, he was moved by the desperate need for clean water especially in the outlying villages. He was so motivated that it started him to create a non-profit called “bees trees water”.

Today, “bees trees water” is a registered 501c3 in the state of New York. Their mission is to serve, change lives and empower people in underserved communities by providing access to clean water and healthier communities. Currently bees trees water is partnering with Hope Foundation in Kolkata to provide proper sanitation and clean water to the slum communities. They plan on continuing the program for the upcoming years with the partnership of the Rotary Club on Inner City.

Spicer also continues working in the beauty industry as a point of purchase expert, with a career spanning over 30 years in the industry. He lives in NY with his wife, Andie Moeder and Pepper, their noisy schnauzer. He also has 2 adult sons from a previous marriage who live in NY.
